- a. United States Army Combat Readiness Center "Must Do's."
- b. Memorandum, Department of the Army, To The Leaders of the United States Army, Army Readiness Assessment Program, dated 8 February 2006.
- c. Memorandum, Department of the Army, Army Safety and Occupational Health Objectives for Fiscal Year (FY) 2007, dated 13 October 2006.

2. The Soldiers of the United States Army Forces Command continued in their fine tradition in FY06 and the first quarter of FY07, performing admirably in adverse conditions, against an ever-evolving enemy. The best and brightest Army leaders are providing the most capable warriors with the right path to success.

3. Forces Command fatality and accident rates declined during FY06 and are continuing to trend downward in the first quarter of FY07. This is a direct result of Command active engagement in risk mitigation. Great work! Keep the focus on the Secretary of Defense's goals.

4. All leaders must place special attention on the mandatory risk mitigation programs (Must Do's) outlined on the Combat Readiness Center's (CRC) website under the Commander's Corner tab. I have recently placed additional emphasis on accident reporting, Army Readiness Assessment Program and Composite Risk Management training and utilization. These areas need engaged leadership.

5. Risks for the upcoming quarter include those associated with the winter months. Leaders at all levels must stay engaged and alert for the high risk Soldiers within their commands to prevent the next accident.

6. My focus areas for the upcoming quarter are shown in the enclosed Strategic Risk Assessment document. Also, I want to ensure that Safety and Occupational
